

ABSTRACT

A lighting device has an interchangeable display element that is illuminated by a light bulb. The display element being maintained on a telescoping body such that the height of the display element is adjustable. The lighting device is operable with a variety of electrical power sources.